ABSTRACT

Information on the costs of attending different types of postsecondary institutions are presented in 18 tables showing average expenses for resident students, both those living in campus housing and those in private housing, commuting students, and self-supporting students. Also presented are data showing how postsecondary educational expenses are increasing and how expenses vary by region. Some findings are: (1)-the overall increase in total expenses for resident students at all types of institutions from 1975-76 to 1976-77 averages about 8 percent; (2)-total expenses rose 8 percent for resident students at public institutions and 6 percent for resident students at private institutions from 1975-76 to 1976-77; (3)-the difference in total expenses for resident and commuter students is approximately $500; (4)-the difference in the tuition and fees between private and public institutions is $1,353 for the two-year institution and $1,708 for the four-year institution; and (5)-total expenses minus tuition and fees vary only slightly by institutional type and control. A listing of student expenses at over 2,500 postsecondary institutions across the United States is given as reported by the institutions. (Author)

The College Scholarship Service (CSS) is an activity of the College Entrance Examination Board, concerned with improving equal educational opportunity. The CSS through the determination of financial need assists in the equitable distribution of financial assistance to students. Its services are offered to students and their parents, to secondary schools, to noncollegiate sponsors of financial aid programs, and to all institutions of postsecondary education. Operational activities for the College Scholarship Service are performed by Educational Testing Service.

The College Entrance Examination Board is a nonprofit membership organization that provides tests and other educational services for students, schools, and colleges. The membership is composed of more than 2,000 colleges, schools, school systems, and education associations.

Summary of contents

Analysis of information on the costs of attending different types of postsecondary institutions. There are 18 tables showing average expenses for resident students, both those living in campus housing and those in private housing, commuting students, and self-supporting students. In addition, there are data showing how postsecondary educational expenses are increasing and how expenses vary by College Board region.

Some of the findings

- The overall increase in total expenses for resident students at all types of institutions from 1975-76 to 1976-77 averages about 8 percent.
- Total expenses rose 8 percent for resident students at public institutions and 6 percent for resident students at private institutions from 1975-76 to 1976-77.
- The difference in total expenses for resident and commuter students is approximately $500.
- The difference in the tuition and fees between private and public institutions is $1,353 for the two-year institution and $1,708 for the four-year institution.
- Total expenses minus tuition and fees vary only slightly by institutional type and control.

A listing of student expenses at over 2,500 postsecondary institutions across the United States as reported by the institutions.

The growing need for information on expenses at postsecondary institutions

While the most important considerations in choosing a postsecondary institution are educational, a growing number of American families are concerned about educational costs. Not only the lower-income family, but also middle-income and upper-income families are finding it increasingly difficult to meet the costs of a college education. To cope with the problem of financing a college education, parents and students need to plan ahead. To do this effectively, information is needed about the kinds of financial support available and the cost of postsecondary education.

A good deal of information is available about the kinds of student financial aid provided by federal and state governments, private agencies, and institutions of postsecondary education. But all too often, there is too little information available and too little consideration given to the other half of the problem—the costs of the kind of educational program the student will pursue.

To assist students who may lack the necessary financial resources to cover educational costs, there is help in the form of student financial aid. Much of the available financial aid is awarded on the basis of need. In order for postsecondary institutions to fairly assess the financial need of students, institutions must consider two major factors: (1) how much the family can afford to pay toward the cost of education beyond high school and (2) the expenses associated with attending a postsecondary institution. In this book, the focus is on the construction of a reasonable student expense budget. Meeting College Costs, another booklet prepared by the College Scholarship Service, provides a step-by-step outline parents and students can use to determine how much they can afford to spend for educational costs and also assists in figuring their financial need.

Using this book

It should be remembered that the cost estimates listed here were provided by the postsecondary institutions themselves and are the figures typically used by these institutions in determining a student's financial need. Institutions generally have various student budgets which relate to such factors as where the student lives and the size of the student's family. Therefore, this book provides four different budget types: resident budgets for students living on and off the campus, a budget for commuting students, and one for self-supporting students. Explanations of these budgets appear on page xiii. These budgets for the four different student categories represent average costs and any individual student at an institution may have expenses that vary from these. But these expense figures can be useful, particularly in helping students, parents, and school counselors in making plans about financing postsecondary education and in making preliminary estimates of financial need using the procedures given in Meeting College Costs.

The data provided in this book were collected by the College Scholarship Service (CSS), an activity of the College Entrance Examination Board, that assists postsecondary institutions, states. and federal agencies in determining how much financial need a particular student has at a particular institution. The CSS itself does not grant any financial assistance, but only helps parents and students who seek financial assistance to present their financial situation and assists institutions in determining the student's financial need.

What is an expense budget?

A student expense budget is meant to be all-inclusive in order to provide for both direct educational and living expenses. The expense budget for the typical student at a postsecondary institution is made up of five principal parts: tuition and fees, books and supplies, room and board, personal expenses, and transportation. In determining an individual student's financial need, the institution will begin with these items and then consider other expenses that may be necessary such as medical care, debt repayment, etc. But the basic five items are generally included in the budgets used for all students.

Tuition and fees

Tuition is the institution's charge for instruction. Fees may be charged for such services as the library, the health center, the student center, and so on. While the actual instructional costs vary from one institution to another according to the curriculum, academic level, and type of educational program offered, the tuition and fees charged students are more closely related to the kind of institution they are attending. As a general rule, tuition and fees at public institutions are the lowest, particularly for students who are legal residents of the state or district in which the institution is located. Public institutions, both two-year and four-year, typically have an additional tuition charge for students who are not legal residents of the state or district. This "out-of-state" or "out-of-district" tuition may make the cost of attending a public institution as high or higher than that of a private institution.

Public and private institutions generally set their tuition charge below the real costs of providing the educational instruction. Tuition charges at private institutions usually cover a larger percentage of the real costs so they are likely to be considerably higher than those of public institutions. Proprietary schools normally set their prices to cover all their own costs.

The following table shows the estimated average tuition and fees for public two- and four-year institutions, private two- and four-year institutions, and proprietary institutions, for the 1976-77 academic year. The amounts shown here for the public institutions are the average amounts charged to students who are legal residents of the state or district in which the institution is located. At some of the reporting public two-year institutions, there was no tuition charge to students who were legal residents. If only institutions that charge tuition and fees are considered, the average charge is $394. The additional out-of-state (or district) charge for public two- and four-year institutions is $674 and $930 respectively.

Books and supplies

Every college student has to buy books, pencils, paper, and other supplies used in his or her studies. The amount a student spends for books and supplies will vary only slightly by type of institution. However, the amount an individual spends will generally relate to the selected curriculum or types of classes the student takes. Typically, art and engineering students must purchase relatively expensive supplies. For example, a course in engineering may require a student to purchase a slide-rule or a small desk-calculator. Most institutions have a campus bookstore where students can purchase the books and supplies they need, including those that have been "used" by other students who have completed the course earlier. The institutions in this survey indicate that the costs of books and supplies for full-time students attending classes for nine months during 1976-77 range from $177 to $213 (see Table 2).

Room and board

In constructing a student expense budget most institutions will include living costs which may vary depending upon the student's choice of residence. The student may choose to reside in an on-campus dormitory or other institutionally operated housing, to live near the campus in privately owned housing such as an apartment or rooming house, or to live at home with his or her parents. Students who do not live at home with their parents are typically referred to as resident students (not to be confused with legal in-state residents used in the discussion of tuition and fees) and those living at home are called commuters. Institutions with on-campus housing have reported the rate charge to students who live in the college dormitory. This rate includes a room and most meals for nine months (except for holidays and vacation periods). Institutions with no dormitory facilities that permit students to live in off-campus housing have provided data on the average costs to students who do not live at home or in a college dormitory but who find a place of their own and must pay their own rent and buy their own food. These costs depend on where the housing is located and whether the accommodations are shared, but in general, off-campus housing costs are about $100 more than the amount charged to students who live in a college dormitory.

"Commuting" students, those who live at home with their parents, generally do not have to spend as much for living costs as resident students because of the absence of housing charges. But families should remember that they will still need to buy food for the student and to pay for other normal living expenses. The commuter will need money for meals on the campus since classes may start early in the morning and go on until late at night. Students who live at home may have to buy at least one meal a day on campus, and usually will spend additional amounts on snacks bought in the student center or restaurants around the campus.

The following table shows the amounts institutions estimate their resident and commuter students should plan to spend for room and board for the normal nine-month academic year in 1976-77. The room and board costs do not vary greatly for the different types of institutions, in particular the costs at four-year institutions are very similar. Resident costs at the proprietary institutions are the highest, largely because these institutions are located in urban areas where resident facilities tend to be slightly more expensive especially for students who must find their own housing in the community. By type of student, the study shows a difference of between $400 and $600 in room and board expenses for resident students versus the commuting student.

Personal or other expenses

Personal or other expenses, sometimes called "miscellaneous," include items such as clothing, laundry, toothpaste and soap, recreation, medical insurance, and incidental furnishings for dormitory rooms. Many students think they can economize in this area, but as Table 4 shows, the institutions uniformly estimate that resident students as well as commuter students will spend more than $400 for these items. The average costs of personal expenses for commuter students varies by less than $51 from one institution to another.

Transportation

Almost all students must spend some money for travel. Dependent students who stay on or near the campus must travel to get there at the start of the year and return home at the end of the year. Most resident students also go home at least once or twice during the year. For the purpose of establishing a budget to be used in determining a student's need, only the costs of two round-trips home would be counted by most institutions. Students who live at home and commute to the campus have to pay almost daily transportation costs. This may be public transportation or by private car. At some institutions, particularly those located in large cities, the cost of daily parking can be substantial. As the following table shows, all types of institutions estimate a larger amount for the average transportation expenses of commuter students than for residents. This additional amount is approximately $100.

Putting it all together

In making a total expense budget, the five budget components discussed here should be added together. Table 6 shows the average total expenses for resident and commuter students estimated by the postsecondary institutions for the 1976-77 academic year. The lowest student budgets are found at public institutions. The major reason private and proprietary institutions have larger total expenses than public institutions is because of higher tuition and fees. This point is illustrated in Table 7. When all expenses except tuition and fees are considered, the variation in the costs of attendance at different types of institutions is not great, particularly among nonprofit institutions where the maximum difference within the budget category is $172. Between four-year institutions the differences in the costs of items other than tuition are even less and vary by less than $70.

Tables 8, 9, and 10 show the average budgets for resident and commuter students at the five different types of institutions. For resident students at public institutions the largest part of the budget is room and board – about 50 percent. At private institutions, tuition and fees account for the highest proportion of costs – between 40 and 51 percent of the total costs. For resident on-campus students at the public four-year institutions, tuition and fees make up about 22 percent of their total expenditure; books and supplies, 7 percent; room and board, 47 percent; transportation, 7 percent; and personal miscellaneous expenses, an additional 17 percent. Students who are campus residents at private four-year institutions spend 51 percent of their money on tuition and fees; books and supplies, 5 percent; room and board, 30 percent; personal miscellaneous expenses, 9 percent; and on transportation, 5 percent.

Costs are changing

The cost of a postsecondary education, like everything else, is going up. Total expenses for resident students at four-year public institutions went up 8 percent from 1975-76 to 1976-77 and went up 6 percent for the same period at four-year private institutions. The average budget for commuter students in public two-year colleges has increased $165 (8 percent) over the past year; the percentage increase is the same for the public four-year institutions; and the average commuter budget has increased $182 (8 percent) over the past year. (See Tables 11 and 12.)

Increases in tuition and fees

In dollar amounts the increase in tuition and fees for public four-year institutions is the smallest, although in percentage terms, the smallest increase was at the four-year private institutions (Table 13). Tuition and fees at public two-year institutions show the greatest percentage increase—29 percent over last year or 130 percent since 1970-71. Tuition and fees at the four-year public institutions will increase 7 percent—the same percentage increase as reported last year. Viewed over the six-year period, the increases at the public four-year institutions have amounted to 57 percent ($226). The largest increase in dollars occurred among proprietary institutions, but it should be pointed out that the number of proprietary institutions reporting expense data has been small.

The expenses of self-supporting students

So far the discussion has concerned the expenses of students who either live at home or live on or near the campus and who are dependent on their parents. Students who are not living at home, are not claimed by their parents for tax purposes, and who do not receive more than $600 in financial support are generally called self-supporting. These students must typically provide for their own maintenance or living costs for a 12-month period. Therefore, the living expenses of self-supporting students are usually higher than for dependent students whose budgets are figured in most cases for nine months. Some institutions, for the purpose of determining a student's eligibility for financial aid, may use nine-month budgets for self-supporting students too.

Because self-supporting students have the responsibility for maintaining their own residence and frequently have dependents of their own, these students are more likely to have higher personal expenses than dependent students. They may also have such extra expenses as child care and outstanding debts that are not typical of the dependent student. Based on the data in this survey, the expenses of self-supporting students are larger than comparable expenses for dependent students for each of the three expense categories, excluding tuition and fees and books and supplies. The same charges for tuition and fees and books and supplies were used for dependent and self-supporting students, on the assumption that all students were attending classes for nine months.

As in the case of dependent students, the costs for those items other than tuition and fees are very similar regardless of the type of institution (Table 14). The maximum difference for these costs in 1976-77 is $36 for books and supplies, $63 for room and board, $135 for personal expenses, and $90 for transportation. The lowest expenses excluding tuition and fees for a 12-month self-supporting student are reported by the private two-year institutions and the highest by the public 4-year institutions (Table 15). The increase in costs for self-supporting students is approximately 12 percent when all expenses except tuition and fees are considered (Table 16). In absolute terms, the average

Expenses by College Board Region

The College Board is divided into six regions. The states composing each of the regions can be seen by looking at the map on the back inside cover of this book. There is a difference of approximately $376 in the tuition and fee charge for public institutions among the six regions (Table 17). The highest charges are reported in the Middle States region for public institutions and in the Northeast for private institutions; the lowest charges for public institutions are found in the West; the lowest charges for private institutions are in the Southwest. Among the various regions the maximum differences in tuition and fees for private institutions is about $951. The highest tuition and fee charges for proprietary institutions is found in the West; the lowest in the Midwest. The difference in costs between public and private institutions is largest in the New England region ($2,064) and smallest in the Southwest ($1,345). Costs other than tuition and fees for the different regions do vary some (Table 18). The average difference is about $429 for resident students on campus, $538 for residents living off campus, $318 for commuter students, and $491 for self-supporting students. In the case of resident on-campus students the lowest costs are to be found in the South. For the nine-month resident student on campus these expenses are likely to be highest in New England. Residents living in private housing have the highest costs in the West and the lowest costs in the Midwest. Institutions in the West report the highest costs for the commuting student, and those from the Middle States region for the self-supporting student.

Expenses at specific institutions

It should be noted that figures for these costs are both estimated and average. As averages, the estimates included here may not be appropriate for the particular circumstances of an individual student. The professional financial aid administrator at each institution must review individually the needs of each student who applies for assistance and must develop a specific budget to represent that student's real costs for the year. Such individual budgets may differ from the averages presented in this publication.

But the budgets in this book can be used for planning purposes. Students who will need financial assistance to meet college costs must plan ahead. One important step is to apply for financial aid early. As part of the financial aid application process many institutions ask students to file a Parents' Confidential Statement (PCS). The PCS is used by institutions in determining the need students have for financial assistance. The PCS is designed to collect information about a family's financial circumstances. Parents complete this form and send it to the College Scholarship Service where it is analyzed and a report prepared for every institution and scholarship sponsor named by the parent. Copies of the PCS are available from guidance counselors in high schools and at community agencies. Following the budget information for most institutions shown in this book is the date by which the institution suggests that the parents send the PCS to the College Scholarship Service for analysis. The date provided in this publication is intended to assure adequate time for processing by the CSS, and for institutional review and award decisions to be made. It should not be interpreted as a deadline date, for many postsecondary institutions may review PCS forms filed with the CSS after this date. The date may also differ from the deadlines for financial aid applications, which are published by most institutions in their catalog or financial aid publications. In addition, a large number of institutions use the Student's Financial Statement (SFS), another need analysis document of the CSS that assists in figuring the need of dependent or self-supporting students. The SFS is distributed directly by the institutions that use it. Specific information about the application deadlines of individual institutions can be obtained from the financial aid administrator.

Meeting college costs

The responsibility for meeting postsecondary education costs is shared by the student, his parents, the institutions, private donors and agencies, and the various levels of government. This pattern of financing reflects the philosophy that education benefits both the individual and the society. The College Scholarship Service assists institutions and other sources of financial assistance in estimating how much a student and his parents can contribute toward college expenses. This publication is intended to assist in estimating what these expenses will be. Using the student expense budgets found in this book and the procedures for determining an estimated family contribution toward postsecondary costs found in the CSS booklet Meeting College Costs, a student can get a rough idea of his or her financial need. Students who are knowledgeable about postsecondary educational costs, the availability of financial aid, and the steps for applying for these funds, should have the best chance of attending the institution of their choice.

Institutions' Estimates of Student Expenses

How the data were collected

The data were collected from institutions by the CSS on a form entitled "Institutional Estimate of Student Expenses for Academic Year 1976-77." This year a special effort was made to collect expense data through the mailing of a form to institutional aid administrators that permits institutions to update their information. Institutions returning this form by January 15, 1976, were included in the publication. Those institutions submitting this form for the 1975-76 academic year but which have not submitted information for 1976-77 are indicated with an asterisk (*). It should be noted that costs may be expected to increase at those institutions for which there is an asterisk.

Definition of terms

In an effort to collect comparable budget information for guidance purposes, the budget categories were specifically defined.

Resident budget (institutional housing)—the nine-month expenses of dependent students living away from their parents, in facilities operated by the institution. A total budget figure is given when an institution provided figures for tuition and fees, books and supplies, and at least one of the following: room and board, transportation, and personal expenses.

Resident budget (private housing)—the nine-month expenses of dependent students living away from home in private housing.

Commuter budget—the nine-month expenses of dependent students who live at home with their parents.

Self-supporting budget—the 12-month expenses of single, self-supporting students.

Information was requested only when it applied to students who attend the institution. For example, if an institution has only commuter students, the resident columns should be blank. When an institution has a range of expenses for any one category, for example, transportation expenses for commuter students, the average expenses was requested.

The budget components are defined below:

Tuition and fees
Tuition and general fees charged to all first-year students. Out-of-state tuition represents only the additional charge made to students who do not meet state (or district) residence requirements.

Books and supplies
The average cost of books and supplies for a first-year student.

Room and board
For the resident budget, the room and board charges for a student living in facilities operated by the institution and/or, the average cost of room and board for students maintaining a residence away from their parents.

For the commuter budget, the cost of a student's food and other at-home miscellaneous expenses, excluding the estimated cost of a room.

For the self-supporting student budget, the average room and board expenses for a single individual for a 12-month period.

Personal expenses
The average expenditures for personal or "miscellaneous" expenses such as clothing, laundry, entertainment, incidental meals, medical insurance, and furnishings as applicable.

Transportation
For the resident budgets, this figure would normally be the cost of two round trips from the student's home; for the commuter or self-supporting budget, this figure reflects the total costs of transportation to and from the institution during the 9- or 12-month period.
